Cori Morrison Selected as 2022 National Coalition of Black Women Sheroes Award in Healthcare

Dr. Cori Morrison was nominated and selected as an honoree for the 2022 National Coalition of Black Women Sheroes Award in Healthcare. This national organization advocates and promotes gender equity in health, education and economic empowerment in underrepresented populations. Cori was nominated for her endeavors involving community outreach, promoting healthcare access and mentorship in efforts to narrow the gap of underrepresented minority groups in medicine. Congratulations, Cori!

LSU Medical Student Nicholas Christakis Receives Award from the Endocrine Society

Dr. Stuart Chalew shared some great news from the Endocrinology Division. LSU Medical Student Nicholas Christakis recently received the 2022 Research Experience for Graduate and Medical Students (REGMS) award from The Endocrine Society, the major professional society for academic, bench scientists and clinical endocrinologists in the United States.

Nicholas is completing his first year of medical school at LSU and has devoted some of his busy hours to participating in research in the Department of Pediatrics, Endocrine Section. In recognition of Nicholas's efforts, the award includes a $2,500 honorarium to help with costs incurred while working on his summer research project.

In addition, Nicholas will be first author for a poster presentation at the upcoming American Diabetes Association's annual Scientific Sessions here in NOLA next month.

Congratulations to Nicholas and the Endocrine team!

#NationalAdolescentHealthMonth

#HealthyYouthNAHM

May is National Adolescent Health Month

During NAHM, sustain equitable, accessible, youth-friendly services.

Join the Office of Population Affairs during National Adolescent Health Month to sustain equitable, accessible, youth-friendly services. Young people—especially those with chronic conditions and disabilities—can experience serious gaps in care as they get older. Young people who experience homelessness, foster care, and the juvenile justice system and who live in mixed immigration status households can have a difficult time obtaining healthcare. Because access to healthcare services is essential, it is important for parents, caregivers, and healthcare providers to help adolescents learn to navigate the healthcare system.
